This document describes the Internationalized Domain Names (IDN) Character Table used by Amazon EU S.à r.l. ("Amazon") within the TLD registry for the registration of domains in the Japanese language. Amazon's Japanese IDN implementation has a feature that mitigates homographic attacks due to Han variants by blocking a name from being registered if a similar name is already registered. The mechanism by which this works is that every registered domain name has a computed canonical string associated with it. This canonical string is only used internally to block similar names from being registered.

The table below lists the characters allowed for registration under the "jp" language tag in the first column. The second column shows the canonical codepoint corresponding to the first column. Due to the differences between this table and the TLD Chinese language table, some characters in the second column of this table may not appear in the first column at all. However, this should not affect registrars as the second column is only used internally by the registry and provided as a reference.

This table is in compliance with the ICANN Guidelines for the Implementation of Internationalized Domain Names and is intended for publication in the IANA IDN Character Table Registry.
